Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Kelley left for San Diego where they are guests at Hotel Coronado.

CREDIT MEN PAY HONOR TO LINCOLN

Ed. N. Radke Makes An Address on Martyred President

The Credit Association at its luncheon yesterday in the Glenn Inn, and amidst the business of the hour, paused to pay honor to Abraham Lincoln. Ed N. Radke forcibly reminded those present that not enough attention is being paid to the memory of this great man.

Mr. Radke said he had visited the little town where Lincoln attended school, a short time ago, and that the grocery store and trail to the old mill is still kept intact, but that the visitors to this historic spot are very few; that he met no one while there who had come to see the old home of the great man. Others paid their respects to the memory of Lincoln.

The matter of a municipal bus line was discussed. It was brought out that a bus line operating throughout the residence section of Glendale and vicinity would work great good to the business interests of Glendale, but as to the line reaching Los Angeles and benefiting business there seemed to be a diversity of opinion. A committee consisting of Ed N. Radke, chairman; Harry A. Kent, Harry White, C. C. Sherrod and A. T. Cowan was appointed to take up the matter of the bus line with Mr. Gulick, who had a communication before the association, setting forth his plans.

City Manager Reeves advised the Credit Association that the city purchasing agent had been instructed to buy everything in Glendale, where prices and quality were on an equal basis with outside prices.

The closing committee, Messrs. Kelty and Smith, whose term expired at the last meeting, announced they could not serve another term, and President Emery will name a new committee.

The list of bad check artists sent to Secretary Pilling was read, and members were advised to be on the alert for this gentry. Descriptions of the check artists varied from the seemingly staid business man to the dapper young fellow who calls everyone he meets by the first name. The list was a large one and members of the association can get the names from Mr. Pilling. One member announced that he thought he had already been stung by one of the men whose names had been sent from credit associations in the east.

Discussion of the pageant of progress was taken up, and the matter of a division of funds and the purpose for which the same are to be used was discussed, but the matter was left to the committees for settlement.

The theft was discovered by members of the family when they returned at about 9:30 o'clock. Entrance to the home was gained by forcing the rear door. Nothing but the money in the bank was taken.

CITY CLERK IS MINUS HIS NUMBER

Somebody has City Clerk Van Wie's number.

No one knows how that particular person got the number or where that person is at the present time, but the truth of the matter is that Van Wie feels a little lonesome since his number disappeared.

The number in question is 288-388 and it belongs on Van's faithful little buzz cart. It has been lost or stolen, the clerk doesn't know which.

Would the finder be so kind, pleads Van, as to return said number plate to the city hall. Van didn't say so, but it stands to reason that a very substantial reward will be paid for the return of the missing plate.

$45,000 SCHOOL BOND ISSUE FOR LA CRESCENTA

Mass Meeting Votes Instruction Call for Election

LA CRESCENTA, Feb. 13.—At a mass meeting held at the school auditorium last night, called by the school trustees of this district, it was voted to call an election to vote $45,000 bonds for the La Crescenta school district. The meeting was presided over by M. S. Collins, with A. Clark acting as secretary. These bonds will provide for the purchase of a site and build a three-room school in Montrose and add two more rooms to the present building, both buildings to be furnished and equipped with a furnace.

The present school building was enlarged last year, but the phenomenal increase in school attendance makes this building entirely inadequate for present needs. The school trustees of the Crescenta school district include C. E. Culberson, H. A. Baldridge and Dr. B. H. Smith.

CITY CHARTER AMENDMENTS CONSIDERED

Civics Committee of the C. of C. Considers City Affairs

A meeting of the civics committee of the Chamber of Commerce, of which George Karr is chairman, met Monday evening at 7:30 at the chamber. Suggestions which had been made for the amendment of the city charter, were considered, eight of which had been referred to the committee.

One suggestion from several sources urged that the office of city manager, in spite of the fact that it is appointive, be subject to the recall as was done in the Long Beach charter.

Several amendments are being discussed by members of the city council and have been referred to the committee which has received all told about eight suggestions. Members do not wish to entertain any that are not submitted in writing.

It is felt that quick action is necessary because the amendments must be voted upon by the people and then go to the state legislature for approval. This should come about early in the session because the calendar late in the session is so congested that action is difficult to secure.

Citizens who have amendments in mind that they believe should be made, are requested to send them to the committee in writing that they may be given consideration and incorporated in the committee's report.

MUSIC COMMITTEE CALLS SPECIAL MEETING

Unit of Community Service Invites Glendalians to Attend

The music committee of Glendale Community Service, of which A. L. Baird is chairman, is inviting a number of the people in Glendale who are especially interested in music to attend a special meeting of the community music institute Monday night, February 19, at the music room of the high school. The purpose of the evening is to discuss some of the plans for the broader development of music along community lines in Glendale, which are proposed by the music committee. Alexander Stewart, community service music organizer, will give a brief talk on "Community Music as a National Movement" and will tell of the work which is being done in many of the cities throughout the country.

It is hoped that this meeting will be largely attended and will result in many new ideas for the music work in Glendale. As it will not be possible to reach everyone interested in this movement by personal invitation, the music committee cordially invites anyone to come who is interested in this work.

"MOTHER" BUNDICK HAS SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Mrs. Ellen Bundick, aged 85 years, generally known as "Mother Bundick," suffered a fractured hip as a result of a fall at her home at 717 South Louise street at 7:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Immediately after the accident she was taken to the Glendale Sanitarium, where the broken member was set by Dr. J. E. Eckles. Reports from the sanitarium this morning were to the effect that the aged lady was resting as easy as could be expected.

Mrs. Bundick rose early Sunday morning, preparatory to going to the morning services at the First Baptist Sunday school and church. She was in the act of lighting the gas stove when the accident happened. A little too much gas was turned on and when Mrs. Bundick went to light it, the flames flared up into her face, touching her hair. Quickly she stepped backward, and as she did so she fell, breaking her hip.

Mother Bundick celebrated her 85th birthday Saturday in her new home on South Louise, to which she moved only last week.

When Rev. E. E. Ford, pastor of the Baptist Church, visited the sufferer Sunday morning, she gave him her "birthday" money that she had all ready for the missionary box at the Sunday school. She also had her weekly offering in her envelop ready for the church service.

Mrs. Bundick is dearly loved by all who know her. All are joining in the hope of her speedy recovery.

One by one the necks of the bottles were severed and the contents emptied onto the ground at the rear of the city hall. Case after case was emptied, until the last of the eight cases was completely "worked over." The bottles, as they were emptied, were thrown in the rubbish cans at the rear of the city hall. LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS, President American Society for Thrift

S. W. STRAUS

AT VARIOUS times efforts have been made under one circumstance or another, to develop practices of thrift by compulsion. But compulsory thrift has never been successful. This is a point to be borne in mind by those who, though actuated by the most splendid motives, may be endeavoring to compel habits of economy among those under their guidance.

Thrift is fundamentally a matter of mental attitude.

The saving of money, the elimination of idleness, the development of efficiency are all matters which primarily must depend for their success on the state of mind of the individual. Before a man practices thrift he must have an understanding of what it involves. He must have an appreciation of its benefits as compared with the sacrifices it sometimes involves. He must know thrift. He must desire thrift. He must be thoroughly sold on the whole plan of thrift practice.

Until such a condition has been reached every effort to compel him to follow these practices will only arouse his antagonism.

It is true, of course, that an employer can compel those who work under him to save a certain portion of their earnings. But broadly speaking, such practices will arouse so much discontentment, resentment and prejudice upon the part of employees that infinitely more harm than good will be done. Moreover, the chief benefit of thrift, namely, the development of personal discipline, will have been lost.

Teach thrift. Preach thrift. Encourage thrift. Inspire thrift. But do not try to compel it.

Arthur Funk of 306 North Cerritos avenue, Alhambra, reported to the Glendale police that his automobile was stolen from Eagle Rock yesterday afternoon. The police departments of the nearby cities have been notified.

Dempsey Will Not Fight Wills

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Out of the tangled muddle into which the heavweight division was tossed by all the recent activities, only one thing seems certain—Harry Wills will not get a chance at the heavyweight title.

Wills may be the outstanding figure among all the challengers for Jack Dempsey's crown, he may be the logical opponent for the champion and all that, but he will never get into the ring with Dempsey, because there is no place in which the ring can be pitched.

Feelers were sent out to seven states by parties interested in the proposed bout when it was being agitated in the middle of the summer. The feelers came back cold. Seven governors said: "Under no circumstances."

All of them gave the same grounds that it was not a good thing for boxing and not a good thing for the public. Its after effects would be too dangerous.

Promoters generally agreed that it was a "risk" to attempt to stage the bout. Conscience and scruples are not necessarily a part of every promoter's makeup. Some of them would do anything and take a chance for the money that would be in it. Others are not that way.

One very prominent promoter had the following to say about it:

"Attempts were made to find a place for Dempsey and Wills to get together. Attempts should have been made to show Wills that he was not being discriminated against by the promoters. Official sentiment was found to be so overwhelmingly against the match that plans were abandoned.

"No one will say officially that the bout cannot be staged, but it never will be put on. For instance, Governor Smith will not have to take the political chances of refusing to grant permission for the bout in New York, for the simple reason that he has not been asked and will not be asked for a permit. The word has been passed out to all interested to "lay off" and instructions of that kind are always obeyed."

* * * * * * *

The difficulty in promoting a heavyweight championship bout between two white men is tremendous and with the color question injected it is impossible. Governor Miller refused to permit the Dempsey-Carpentier fight in New York although Tex Rickard offered to turn over part of the receipts to a fund for disabled soldiers. The governor took the stand that it was a prize fight and that he did not think it could be classed as a boxing exhibition within the meaning of the law.

Wills knows how futile it would be for him to demand the bout and so does his manager, Paddy Mullins. That is one of the reasons why they have been taking a "back seat" when all the other contenders were storming the promoters and doing all kinds of loud talking. He is being properly advised and he is intelligent enough and man enough to know that the breaks are against him and that they will not break.

* * * * * * *

Without full knowledge of the facts, a part of the public will always think that Jack Dempsey was afraid of Wills and that he ran away from him. The fact of the matter is that Dempsey has always wanted to meet Wills, not only because he felt sure his title would not be endangered, but for the reason that Wills would be almost as big a drawing card as Carpentier was. In these days they figure their ability to get them into the arena more than their power to sock.

ROBERTS & ECHOLS SHOW SCOUTS IN DISPLAY

Artistic skill and uniqueness are cleverly combined in the Boy Scout window display at Roberts & Echols drug store in Broadway, near Brand, which was completed yesterday afternoon.

At the very front is shown Mayor Spencer Robinson and "Pete" Ferry, decorated with boxing gloves, being an enlargement of the actual photo taken at the Boy Scout summer camp at Catalina. Surrounding these champion bantam weights are a score of Scouts who from their looks are thoroughly enjoying the melee. In the background is the setting itself showing the hills and skyline. The whole is taken from scenes of the camp and enlarged more than twenty times the original size. The individuals have been cut out from the photos themselves until they actually look like they are alive. The whole picture has been handpainted with oils, which adds to the display.

F. H. Roberts, who originated the idea, has been working on the photos for several months past to get the result. He is a genuine booster of the Boy Scout movement.

If you haven't seen the window at Roberts & Echols, don't pass it by because it is really a most excellent exposition of talent and skill.

C. M. BRIGGS HAS MOVED TO NEW QUARTERS

C. M. Briggs, who for the past several years has been actively engaged in the construction of homes in Glendale, is now comfortably located at 105½ South Central avenue.

There are very few builders in Glendale who have had so much to do with the upbuilding of the city as has Mr. Briggs. From the first home built by him in Glendale a very high standard of architecture and workmanship has been maintained. It has not been Mr. Briggs' ambition to see how quickly he could put up his homes, but how good he could make them. Every foot of lumber that goes into his buildings is of the finest quality and, in fact, everything in connection with his homes is just as it should be.

Mr. Briggs has an excellent assortment of plans from which the prospective builder may choose, or he will draw plans and specifications to suit the individual builder. All of the details regarding the construction of the home is taken care of by Mr. Briggs, this removing a great deal of the worry from the owner.

SPECIALTY BOOT SHOP GROWS TO NEW QUARTERS

Complete and most attractive in its appointments will be the new quarters of the Specialty Boot Shop at 126 South Brand boulevard, which will have its formal opening in the new location the latter part of the week. This shoe store, which features high class products and service, was formerly located in the Court Shops at 213 East Broadway.

Joseph Goldberg, and his associate, R. C. Smith, announce that when all the fixtures are installed they expect to have the finest high-class shoe store in Glendale. The Specialty Boot Shop carries the Florsheim shoes for men and the Arch Preserver shoe for women, as well as other high-class makes of shoes for men, women and growing girls.

Mr. Goldberg says: "The people of Glendale appreciate good service and good quality shoes. This has been indicated by the patronage since the Specialty Boot Shop first opened at its former location. We will carry a much larger stock here and will have more commodious quarters to take care of our trade."

Fixtures and window racks of French grey will be combined with reed furniture in the furnishings.

DAINTY WEDDING AT THE SIPPLE RESIDENCE

Miss Marjorie Irene Tyler United to Raymond Edward Du Charme

On Thursday evening, February 8, at 8:30 o'clock, occurred a very pretty home wedding, when Marjorie Irene Tyler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sipple of 230 N. Louise street, Glendale, was united in marriage with Mr. Raymond Edward Du Charme of Los Angeles.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white crepe domitos, with veil and orange blossoms, carrying a shower bouquet of white rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

She was attended by Hazel Tyler Du Charme, who wore green taffeta and lace. Her bouquet was pink sweet peas and ferns.

Mr. Du Charme was attended by his brother, Milton Du Charme.

Just preceding the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. C. M. Calderwood of the Congregational Church, Miss Emily Kapps sang very softly, "I Love You Truly." The young people entered the living room to the strains of a wedding march, played by Miss Silence Lareen of Los Angeles. Immediately after the wedding a reception was held, refreshments being served to about 35 guests. They included: Mr. and Mrs. Milton Du Charme, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Juaire and daughter Ermine, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gets, Mrs. Ray Lockhart, the Misses Nettie Noble, Blanch Chapin, Sara McDonald and Ida Sipple, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Sipple and three children, all of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McAdams, Palmdale, Calif.; Mr. Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Sipple, the Misses Emily Kapp, Beatrice Carlson, Lillian Mills, Edith Tyler, Elsie Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Tyler, Mrs. Frank Richardson and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sipple of Glendale.

Mr. and Mrs. Du Charme will be at home to their many friends at 1811 West 27th Street, Los Angeles, where the best wishes for a life of happiness go with them from a host of their friends.

A BOOK FOR VALENTINE

My lady of the Valentines is lovelier by far
Than mountains, hills, or little streams,
Than dawn or evening star.

Now should I send her candy, perfume, or violets,
Why, those are just the silly things
That every lady gets!

I cannot cut my heart out to send her wrapped in gold,
I cannot send her kisses,
For distance makes them cold.

So I shall send a story book, as long as it can be,
And all the time she's reading it,
Perhaps she'll think of me.
(In The Bookman for February).

Mrs. Max Wyman and Miss Nettie Holcomb from Seattle, Wash., were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Parr of 224 South Orange street.

K. OF C. ANNOUNCES PRE-LENTEN DANCE

The Glendale council, No. 1920, Knights of Columbus, will give its "last chance" dance tonight at the clubhouse, 330 East Lomita avenue. This will be a pre-lenten dance. Inasmuch as the members of the club will be unable to have any celebrations during Lent they are planning to make this affair the biggest event during the year. The arrangements for the dance are in charge of Lecturer Hugh Bryant and the new members of the organization, who claim they will be able to outdo the efforts of the old members.

Grand Knight Harry Girard has arranged for a number of interesting features which are being kept a surprise. A seven-piece orchestra has been engaged to furnish music. Many members from the councils of Los Angeles and other nearby cities are planning to attend.

MRS. PENDROY IN FRIGID COUNTRY REPORTS BUYS

Other Buyers Start for East After Spring Goods

Earl Pendroy, proprietor of the Pendroy store is in receipt of a message from Mrs. Pendroy, who left for New York last week, that she has run into a temperature of 8 below zero or about 50 degrees colder than the climate she left in Glendale.

When she started for the Atlantic coast, S. W. Swearengen of the same firm left for St. Louis to buy piece goods and William Baker went north to San Francisco to attend the furniture fair being held there and lay in stocks of toys and furniture.

Mr. Pendroy says at the rate his trade is growing his corps of buyers must increase rather than diminish and that their work will be not only to renew stocks, but to acquaint themselves with the things in vogue in all lines.

He is rapidly building up his stock of dishes and household utensils and now has an excellent line of porcelain and china, some of the last named stocks having come direct from Limoges, France, from the factory of Theodore Haviland.

The transfer of art goods to the newly constructed balcony will afford increased space for furniture, which is also being largely increased, samples being on display and the main stock being kept in the Pendroy warehouse and delivered from there.

Mrs. Alta J. Bryan of New York city arrived Saturday and will spend some time with her brother, J. M. Lovell and family, at 505 North Maryland. While en route to California she made several stops and visited friends and relatives. Mrs. Bryan thinks Glendale is a great little city and would like to come back here to live, provided she could induce her daughter, Grace Bryan, who is an author and scenario writer, to come with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Smith, who have been spending the past three weeks in Glendale, are leaving today for Riverside, where they will have a short farewell visit with their brother, "Cliff" Thompson, and on Thursday take the train at San Bernardino for their home in Chanute, Kan.

LUMBAGO

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE
(Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)

Lumbago, one of the commonest of ailments, is from a medical point of view one of the most perplexing. Cabot, who classifies it with stiff neck as a malady wholly of the muscles, says frankly:

"Nobody knows what it is nor what causes it. Damp weather seems to have some relation to it. It goes off within a few days or, at most a week or two."

More recently lumbago has been made a subject of special study by the German physician, Brun. By him three distinct types are recognized—muscular lumbago, bone lumbago and lumbago which he describes as "a true neuralgia of the lumbar nerves."

Of the three, Brun finds bone lumbago of least frequent and muscular lumbago of most frequent occurrence. To strain and rheumatism he attributes most cases of the muscular type, both strain and rheumatism having a hand in their causation, but in problematical priority:

"Workmen who work half-stripped and subsequently become chilled acquire a rheumatic affection which remains latent until some strain to the lumbar muscles unmasks the condition by the sudden appearance of pain . . .

"Another view is that strain may make the lumbar muscles a place of lowered resistance upon which a subsequent rheumatic affection fastens."

Of course, however, to attribute lumbago to rheumatism is but to use another term of doubtful significance. Accepting the present medical view of rheumatism, it means that infection of some sort is responsible for lumbago, and those persons in whom lumbago is of frequent occurrence would seem to be well advised to have a search made for some "focus" of infection in the tonsils, teeth, etc.

On the other hand, it is important to remember that, as remarked by Cabot, true lumbago seldom lasts more than a few days even in the absence of ameliorative treatment. If an attack persists longer than that there is reason to suspect the presence of some specific organic cause for the pain experienced in the back.

Disease of the sacro-iliac joint may be present, or disease of the lower part of the lumbar spine. Internal hemorrhoids sometimes produce a seeming lumbago. In such a case, according to Dr. J. J. Walsh:

"Proper regulation of the bowels and the use of gluten suppositories will often practically cure the condition, though there will be relapses whenever constipation returns."

As to the treatment of lumbago proper, massage and hot applications afford much relief and hasten the disappearance of the stiffness and pain. The taking of a Turkish bath, according to some authorities, proves extremely helpful in not a few cases.

MILK BENEFITS FOR NEAR EAST BEGIN TODAY

A can of milk each a week, with a small daily bread allowance, is sufficient to keep these two tots plump and healthy in a Near East Relief refugee camp in Constantinople, where the vast demand and curtailed contributions make necessary a careful rationing.

At the K. of P. hall, corner of Park avenue and Brand boulevard, this afternoon was given the first of the milk benefits for the children of the Near East Relief in Armenia. The milk will be collected in one central place, and then taken to the Near East Relief warehouse in Los Angeles, by Mr. John Todd, who has donated his services, and will be a part of the next shipment of supplies.

The benefit for tomorrow will be at the Wilson school for the children of the Wilson, Colorado and Pacific schools.

A MUNICIPAL SWIMMING POOL in Johnstown, Pa., is 252 feet long and 165 feet wide, has a capacity of 1,000,000 gallons, accommodates 1,000 bathers, is 10 feet deep at the center, and 15 inches at the edge, and cost, complete, $24,932.

LOWER TAXES NOT YET IN SIGHT, SAYS BABSON

Statistician Reports on Tax Situation in Washington for Business Men and Investors

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., Feb. 13.—"When will taxes be reduced?"

The problem is uppermost in the minds of the American business man and investor as he figures his report for 1922.

To get the answer, Roger W. Babson, statistician, has spent a week in Washington studying the tax situation. His first hand findings and unbiased report is of vital interest.

"Future taxes," says Mr. Babson, "depend, in part, upon future expenditures. The figures for the past year on this score, at least, are very hopeful. Whatever criticism may be made of the present administration it must be admitted that it has exerted a continuous effort to reduce expenditures. An honest attempt is being made to introduce and operate a budget system. At the conference of bureau chiefs, held recently at the Continental Memorial hall, some 600 men met to effect further economy in the operation of the government business.

"Fixed charges, interest rates, and previous obligations, of course, cannot be changed, and in spite of the splendid work done to cut down current expenditures, the expenses of the government for 1922 reached a total of $3,795,302,499.80. Nearly one billion of this amount was paid out as interest on the public debts such as Liberty bonds and other outstanding securities in the United States; $253,800,000 was used in pensions to soldiers, or their dependents, of the War of 1812, Mexican war, Indian wars, Civil war and Spanish-American war, while $450,000,000 was paid for compensations, care and training of veterans of the World War. Approximately $455,000,000 went for the army, and $475,000,000 for the navy. About 50% of our total expenditures go to the payment of interest, sinking funds, pensions and the relief to veterans.

"During the fiscal year of 1922, the government collected $4,109,104,150.94. Present prospects, however, indicate that no such amount will be collected in 1923. The excess profits tax has been removed, and general business is not as prosperous, and therefore will not yield as much in taxes as in previous years. To meet this situation, President Harding has earnestly requested that expenditures be cut by $92,000,000 more.

"If we look at the United States government as we would a corporation, there is no cause for alarm. Expenses have increased, to be sure, but expenses have increased in all businesses. On January 1st, 1923, we had in the United States, in gold $3,933,475,615, about 45% of all the gold in the world. Of this, over three and one-quarter billion is held in the treasury, mostly in the form of bullion. If we look at the ledgers, we find that 3,600,000 taxpayers and 101,300 corporations contributed $2,068,128,192.68 in 1922, while only $336,443,387.18 was received from customs and duties.

"Further study indicates that the problem during the next few years is not one of trying to decrease the present budget, but rather of trying to hold it where it is and keep it from going much higher.

"Unless a miracle happens, some sort of bonus bill will be passed in 1924. If not passed with the president's consent, it will probably be passed over his veto. This will call for a huge additional sum of money. Then there is a tremendous road building program, the proposed nationalization of coal mines and the demands upon the treasury by the farmer bloc.

"When I talked with financiers regarding possible measures of taxation to meet these additional expenditures and proposed increase in our national budget, the suggestions are as follows: (1) a sales tax; (2) a tax on light beer and wines; (3) further customs and internal revenues; (4) collecting from Europe the $10,000,000,000 owed us, and (5) the restoration of the excess profits tax.

"The keener students of taxes almost universally recommend the sales tax, but politically there seems to be little chance of the new congress putting it through. A tax on light beers and wines at the present time is certainly out of the question. Both custom and internal revenue taxes are as high as the public can stand. Hence, by the process of elimination, the political leaders strenuously refuse to cancel the European debt for fear of the re-enactment of the excess profits tax.

"Their fear in this regard is well founded, not from a purely selfish point of view on the business man who must pay such a tax, but because of its effect on the prosperity of the whole country. The re-enactment of such a tax would be a distinct setback to every one. Natural resources, available labor, nor even capital, is sufficient to make a country prosperous. Russia is rich in natural resources. Africa abounds in available labor, and in every country where money is cheapest business is at its worst. Prosperity is really the result of initiative courage and hopefulness. These intangible but all-important forces are the result of encouraging business. We cannot get prosperity by putting a ball and chain on the enterpriser.

"Inheritance taxes may be increased without affecting business. Congress may even increase the tax on incomes from stocks and bonds without harting the farmer, but a re-enactment of the excess profits tax, which paralyzes efficiency, enterprise and initiative, would be distinctly harmful to all sections of the country and to farmers, business men and wage workers alike.

"These figures on government receipts and expenditures have a direct relation to investors. They mean that the present demand for non-taxable bonds will continue. A good many people who have their money in taxable securities have continued to hold these securities and pay a tax on them with a subconscious hope that some time, some how, some where, their taxes would be reduced. A statistical study of the situation leads one to believe that higher taxes are here to stay, and that it will be a real feat to keep them down to present figures.

"An interest in tax-exempt securities may also be increased by a constitutional amendment preventing the sale of any more 'tax-exempts.' A resolution to this effect is before congress at the present time. If it is passed, it will go before the states for ratification. It will be a long time, however, before such a bill will get the necessary two-thirds of the states to sign it, that it may become a constitutional amendment. Even if enacted it, of course, could not be retroactive and cannot affect the tax-exempt securities already issued. The very agitation may tend to bring out a rush of new issues which will have a depressing effect on the municipal bond market in spite of the strengthening tendency which many people expect.

"All this means," concluded Mr. Babson, "that the very large investors will continue to hold tax-exempt securities, but there is no reason why the average investor should stampede to secure such issues. The bond crop is one crop that has never yet been known to fail. Many people believe that, owing to the improved conditions, money will be much higher and that all bonds will decline in price during the next few months. This may be true, but I seriously doubt it. Although the Babsonchart stands today at 3% above normal, which would ordinarily signify that we are entering another period of inflation, a statistical study strongly suggests that this present optimistic figure is only temporary. The great readjustment which started over two years ago is only about 60% complete. My prediction is that bond prices in 1923 will average about the same as the bond prices in 1922, and the 'tax-exempts' will follow the general market.

"It will be safest for investors to count on present high taxes continuing, even if congress has sense enough not to re-enact an excess profits tax."

FORMER MANAGERS OF NEWPORT CO. ENTER BUSINESS

Twining & Myers, 211½ South Brand boulevard, is one of the latest firms to make its bow to the realty buying, selling, exchanging and boosting public of Glendale and, in fact, the entire of Southern California. But while this firm is new, its members are well-known in Glendale and Los Angeles. They are experts at the real estate profession.

Mr. Twining, it will be remembered, was the capable manager of the F. P. Newport company for the past eight and a half years. For three years he has been a resident of Glendale and during that time, up to a short while ago, he owned a home at 1900 Canada boulevard. This he sold recently and is building another beautiful home at 1628 Hillside drive, in the same beautiful canyon. Mr. Twining was for 25 years, before coming to California, suburban manager for the E. A. Cummings company of Chicago, where he handled many large subdivisions.

Mr. Myers was for seven years assistant to Mr. Twining as manager of the F. P. Newport company. He is now living in Glendale, owning a beautiful home on Camulos avenue, Verdugo Woodlands. He was, before coming to Glendale, in business with his father for 16 years on Florence avenue, Los Angeles, in which vicinity he sold out a number of large tracts.

The new firm of Twining & Myers will do a general real estate business, and will make a specialty of subdivisions.

Both Mr. Twining and Mr. Myers are members of the Glendale chamber of commerce and the Glendale Realty board.

STATE FORESTS IN JEOPARDY

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13.—"Two statements of far-reaching import to forest conservationists appeared simultantously in the news of today," said District Forester Paul G. Redington of the U. S. Forest Service. "I refer first to the constructive and powerful message of the president of the United States, urging that more attention be paid to the forest problems of the nation, and indicating the need for more effective work through cooperative effort on the part of the states, private owners and the federal government. The other is ex-Governor Pardee's announcement of his resignation as chairman of the California State Board of Forestry. This resignation is made in protest against the emasculation of the activities of the board through the withdrawal in the state budget of all funds necessary to maintain the fire prevention and suppression work, the tree-planting program and the redwood park maintenance so ably handled by the state board in the past four years.

"The difference in the attitude toward forest conservation as shown by the president and the state authorities of California is so striking as to be worthy of the most serious consideration by all those who have the interest of our forests and their adequate protection at heart.

"California, up to this time, has recorded a progress in forestry and fire protection matters that has received not only the most favorable nation-wide comment, but has been given unqualified support by the citizens of the state. The need for fire protection and forest preservation is now recognized by 33 of our leading states, all of which make appropriations for this important work. Pennsylvania, which has approximately the same area of watersheds and forested land as California, exclusive of its national forests, spends more than $500,000 annually for fire protection and timber conservation.

"The budget reduction, as announced by the state authorities, and against which ex-Governor Pardee protests, not only means a discontinuance of state activities in the vital matter of fire protection, but acts to preclude (1) the allotment of federal cooperative funds totaling over $45,000 in the biennial period; (2) effective financial cooperation by 26 counties of the state, which in the past two years has amounted to $35,000; (3) cooperative funds to the amount of $29,000, donated by counties, public organizations and water companies in Southern California. These moneys have been used to match special state appropriations (now cut off) in giving intensive protection to the brush cover of the southern mountains—a cover so essential in the protection of the slopes from which comes the water that has made that part of the state renowned as one of the great agricultural regions of the world.

"With other citizens of the state I heartily appreciate the need for keeping the expense of state government within the income, but I am sure that a reduction in state forest funds which did not wipe out the essential fire protection work would have met with no great objection from the taxpayers.

"The federal forest officials, working under the incentive given by the president's encouraging statement, will continue to do everything within their power to deliver efficient fire protection service in the national forests. We have no authority, however, to extend our fire protection activities outside of the national forest boundaries. The withdrawal of state cooperation in this important work will naturally hamper us greatly, since the two organizations were effectively working together. By such action California will also fail to share in the great national campaign so forcefully urged by President Harding for the more adequate protection of our dwindling forest resources."

WESTERN MUTUAL FINANCE CO. IN NEW QUARTERS

Walter T. Haines, Glendale representative of the Western Mutual Finance company, the head offices of which are in Los Angeles, is just moving from his old address at 211 West Broadway to 213 West Broadway, where he will be very glad to meet his many clients and friends.

Mr. Haines said he thought that the people of Glendale have at last awakened to the value of the service he and his company are rendering to the public, and that as a result the number of clients he is receiving is increasing day by day. He said his company has written over $3,000,000 worth of business since last June, which indicated that the concern is doing its share in the upbuilding of Southern California. Practically all of the loans made have been for homes, for it is the homebuilder to which the proposition of the Western Mutual Finance company appeals.

That the prospects for the future are exceedingly bright was the statement made this morning by Mr. Haines. He is more than pleased with the interest the people of Glendale are taking in his company. That he is offering the prospective homebuilder the best chance possible to finance homes is the belief of Mr. Haines. Many folks, he says, are realizing this fact.

THE TOWER OF BABEL

is the tower spoken of in Genesis as being built by mankind after they came down from the ark to the plain from the mountain of the East. It was like the later temple tower of Babylon, except that it was being constructed so high that its top might reach heaven. The builders were miraculously prevented by the confounding of their language. Thus the origin of our many tongues.

FRESHMEN ARE THE HOSTS TO HI-Y GROUPS

The members of the Freshman group of the Hi-Y, under the leadership of W. G. Boyd, had charge of the monthly Hi-Y feed given to the various groups last night in the social hall of the First Methodist church. The speaker for the evening was Dr. Carl Knopf of the history department of the University of Southern California. He spoke on "Where Do We Go From Here," in which he followed up each step in the life of the boys from babyhood until the age of the boys he was talking to, pointing out to them the importance of one step to another. He also emphasized the matter that no matter what the boys did, somebody at sometime had to pay for their conduct. During the supper hour vocal selections were given by the Methodist Male Quartet, which includes Dr. C. R. Lusby, Dr. Lucas and the Butterfield brothers.

The Senior Hi-Y group, under the leadership of G. E. Murphy, will entertain the other groups next Monday night at an evening program of athletics to be given in the social hall of the Methodist church.

Paul Edmonds, president of the Hi-Y, acted as toastmaster for last evening. There were forty-seven present, including Rex C. Kelley, local Y. M. C. A. secretary.

She was very curious about things.

"They tell me your husband is a hydraulic engineer," she said to her best friend, "but I always understood he was something in the city. I didn't know he was a technical expert, or anything wonderful like that."

"He is a hydraulic engineer," said her friend, "but it's not wonderful. He just waters mining stock."

GLENDALIAN SEES PHIL ALGUIN IN TEXAS

S. C. Rand Writes Glendale Press of Murderer's Repatriation

By S. C. BRAND

FREEPORT, Tex., Feb. 7.—(By mail).—Just a little news item. I am here at Freeport where excitement runs high with Texas rangers, reporters and police from Galveston and Houston waiting for the tanker to dock with "little Phil" Alguin on board. Expect to be at the wharf when they get the little Mexican who killed Policeman Fitzgerald some time ago in Los Angeles.

I am on one of my regular business trips into Texas. Rather peculiar I should be here at this time.

FREEPORT, Tex., Feb. 8.—(By mail).—Saw them take little Phil off of the Freeport sulphur tanker No. 6 here this morning. Was standing to the left of little Phil in the rear, wearing a felt hat and checkered overcoat with a cigar in my mouth. The pictures were taken by an Examiner cameraman and you can figure how long a time it will take to print these in the Los Angeles Examiner. Mrs. Rand can point me out to you or either of the Schuck boys with the Peerless home builders just above you on Brand Blvd.

After 11 months in actual use for a tryout or test it has done far better than we ever expected it would do. The 20 machines we have installed now are used more than 6000 times each day and except for the warping of the cards, never are they out of commission. We are now printing our cards on cardboard, which will eliminate this trouble entirely.

Is there a public demand for a Service of this kind, or does the public want reliable information such as can be placed on the Cutler Selected Directory Service Devices for their free use every hour in the day, 365 days in the year? DIVORCE JUDGE FINDS CAUSE OF ACTION

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 13.—"Marriage must be reinstated as an institution, a spiritual manifestation of sacrifice worthy of most ardent loyalty," Judge Ira L. Jayne, of the circuit court declared in summing up his experiences with divorce cases.

"One month I tried 200 divorce cases and with the aid of one of the woman investigators, questioned each of the parties to get at the real cause for divorce," Judge Jayne said.

"Of the 200, but three were contested—less than two per cent. One-third were started by the man and two-thirds by the woman, though I doubt if that means anything, because so many of our divorcing men are so chivalrous that they insist the wife go down and bare the intimate secrets of marriage to the crowded court rooms, and the women seem to want to go. In but 70 of the families, or about one-third, had there ever been children.

"Of the 70 mothers who had children but 39, or about one-half, asked for support from the father, and no woman without children asked for continuous support from her ex-husband. In many of the cases it appeared that the woman was actually earning more money than the man.

"As to the underlying causes it appeared that about 80 per cent were due to a lack of love, a cooling of the affections, call it what you will. Other causes found were drunkenness, separation during the war, propinquity to another.

"Marriage to secure or to maintain the creature comforts of a home no longer is necessary, as the bachelor of either sex, I might say, in these modern days is able to procure all the things that a generation or two ago were thought to be possible only in the home provided by the man and presided over by the woman.

"No one is so radical as to suggest a substitute for the home for child raising. The only successful school so far devised to train boys and girls to be good fathers and mothers is in a home with a good father and a good mother to exemplify the essentials of manhood and womanhood. The home is founded on the institution of marriage. The family must be kept intact. The idividual should subordinate his personal convenience and comfort to the larger loyalty of marriage."

WANTS INCOME TAX

"The tax system of Washington is not equitable, because the revenues are collected largely from one source—that of property," said Prof. H. W. Cordell of the State College of Washington economics department, speaking at Olympia recently to members of the senate and house committees on revenue and taxation. He advocated an income tax as the best means of remedying present tax evils here.

"In 1921, $68,000,000 was raised by taxation in this state," he said. "Of this amount, the inheritance tax, gasoline tax, and all the license fees produced but $5,000,000, or one-fourteenth of the total. Public utility corporations paid 13% of the total on their real and personal property holdings. Other personal property paid 7%, and other real estate paid 70% of the total tax bill."

Massachusetts, with a total tax of $152,000,000, collects $53,000,000, or about one-third of the total from sources other than real property, he said, and Wisconsin, with a total tax of $70,000,000, collects $14,000,000, or about one-fifth, from sources other than real property. He pointed out that as no state has ever successfully taxed intangibles, restoration of the tax on stocks, bonds, mortgages and credits, removed in 1907, was not worth consideration.

"In seeking a solution, first consideration should be given the personal income tax," Professor Goodcell declared. "This tax is the fairest that can be used, and will reach where other forms of taxation do not. It should apply to personal earnings and services only, for business incomes can be reached by another method."

He advocated making exemptions on incomes low, so the tax could be made productive, for the more that is collected the better it will be in interesting more people in the affairs of the state." He favored a minimum exemption of $750 for single persons, and $1,500 for married persons, with a scale of rates running from 1% to 6%. Of money collected from personal incomes by the federal government two-thirds comes from the lower incomes, he declared.

The amateur dramatic society was preparing for a performance of "As You Like It."

The dress rehearsal took place in a garden that was overlooked by a building in course of erection. As the amateurs postured and chanted the bard's beautiful lines, bricklayers above them laid bricks, carpenters planed boards, and masons chipped stones.

Toward the end of the play, during a pause in the rehearsal, a voice from the building operation was heard to say gravely: "I prithee, malapert, pass me yonder trowel."

Editorials by the People

Mr. Editor: I like your paper, and especially your editorials generally. I think it is the best paper in the city, and is intending to be true, and to print the truth. But I have seen a number of articles on Evolution, assuming that evolution is scientific truth. I wish to answer them, and will show that it is neither truth, science or sense, but is the worst scheme of error that has ever been broached, and propagated in and by our educational institutions and teachers. First, what is truth, science and philosophy?

Any truth is a correct statement of any reality, purpose, or fact, exactly as it exists, and never otherwise. As, God is, and is an eternal personal spirit. As to character He is Love. Spirit is life, and life always inheres in spirit. Again, man is a spirit, and is created and made. The central, universal law of spirit is purpose.

Also, matter is, and is created electrons. Its central, universal law is gravity. All matter is a product of spirit, and has the same law that spirit has, viz: Purpose.

Sin is, and is the breaking of law. Also, sin is loving evil, but righteousness is hating evil, error and falseness. Loving God, and man, and the right, and keeping His commandments is the whole duty of man. These are all truths.

"The Church of Christ is the pillar and ground of the truth." But never of falseness or error, or lies. Law is, and is the rule of good character, and of right conduct. The first and the great law is this: "Thou shalt love God perfectly, and hate evil thoroughly, and love thy neighbor as thyself." Another law is this: "Thou shalt hate and renounce the devil and all his works, and the vain pomp and glory of the world, with all covetous desires of the same, and all carnal desires of the flesh, so that thou will not follow nor be led by them." Then thou shalt keep God's holy will and commandments, and walk in the same all the days of thy life." Doing these things is righteousness and salvation, and nothing else is.

All evolutionists, led by Herbert Spencer, their champion and high priest, say that the data of science and philosophy are space, time, matter, motion and force. Note first that in this list is no such a thing as spirit, but only matter. Of course this category includes no eternal spirit, or God, and no human or created spirits, and no spiritual laws, or spiritual activities, but only material facts, processes and movements, that have no will, choice, purpose or design, because no spirit and consequently no intelligence, and only haphazard chance, or inexorable fate, fatalism, and falseness.

The central thought, truth and law of science and philosophy is always a purpose, and end. Time is never anything that exists, created or made. It is only a mental conception by which we measure the succession of events that occur. Space is like time, nothing created, or made and existing. It is only a mental conception by which we designate room or distance, in any direction, from any point, in which things and beings are supposed to exist or live. Motion is like time and space, only a mental conception, used to denote any change of place, in space. Force is the application of power to accomplish some special result, choice or purpose. Power always goes back to will, and will to spirit. Purpose is the central, ultimate, and all pervasive law of spirit—spirit action and spiritual activities. Nothing exists in Nature, or the works of God, or in the affairs of men or devils without the will,—choice or purpose of some spirit—human, devilish or Divine. Some spirit or purpose is always before a product, and its purpose is in a spirit. The purpose of matter is ever to furnish a location, and an arena for the action, and the means for sustaining, and training created spirits. "The worlds are created, not in vain, but to be inhabited, and to make a home for man."

So there are but two substances that exist with which we have to deal. They are—first, Spirit, and second matter—the product of Spirit.

Science is knowledge in system. Science defined, is the regular arrangement of the realities and facts, in any field, or department of knowledge, into their natural system in accord with, and under direction of their main, central truth, law and purpose, or end. So there is not, and cannot be any science without some purpose or end. It follows that philosophy being the science of sciences and of all knowledge, must be defined like science thus, philosophy is the regular arrangement of all knowledge, and of each of its departments, and their realities and facts, into their natural system, in accord with, and under direction of their main central truth, law, purpose and ultimate end.

So the central law, and ultimate truth of both science and philosophy is always to have some purpose or final end in Teleos. There is not and cannot be any science or philosophy without a central purpose, law and end, designed. So evolution, having no purpose, because no spirit, is never and cannot be either science or philosophy. It is only an ignorant, Godless, vicious, conscienceless and villainous scheme; guess, theory and deliberate lie, to get rid of a personal spirit of God and His guidance.

Consequently evolutionists become corrupt, vile and vicious, because they break away from the guidance of God, to that of the devil and his imps. So the wicked go themselves into hell, and all the people that forget, or reject God.

The real data of valid science, and true philosophy must be based upon, and include all the substances that actually exist, with their powers, purposes, laws, processes, movements, products and results. The correct statement of these will be their truths.

Fancies, notions, guesses, ideas, schemes, errors, mistakes, half truths, falsehoods or lies, are never the ground of science or philosophy—because, none of these are knowledge.

And science is knowledge of what exists, or it is nothing, eternal, created or made.

GROCER GETS 38c IN $1

"Of every dollar earned a grocer gets 38c," says Prof. H. H. Maynard of the department of business administration at the State College of Washington in a recent talk to salesmen, merchants and clerks of Colfax. He gave statistics to show that one person in every twenty is engaged in retail business in some connection, and that retailers are not making the money they are supposed to.

"There is one retail store of some sort for every 22 families or 38 working people," he said. "Of every dollar earned, 38 cents goes to a grocery store; and of every dollar the grocer gets, 78 cents to 81 cents goes for produce and goods. From 14% to 18% of the selling price goes for operating expenses. Only one grocer in eighty will last for eight years. The average grocery clerk will sell $15,000 worth of merchandise in a year, and the salary will run from $1,200 to $2,000. On an average, 2 1-2 cents of every $1 spent in a grocery store goes for delivery."

Truths in Epigram

For every grain of wit there is a grain of folly.—Emerson.

In the best books, great men talk to us, give us their most precious thoughts, and pour their souls into ours. God be thanked for books! — Channing.

Nature gives to every time and every season some beauties of its own.—Dickens.

BOOKS AS COMPANIONS

Carlyle, wise man even though crabbed, said that despite all the professors could do, the great University was in books. Readers of books are inspired by widely different motives. Some read with the definite thought of acquiring knowledge. Others desire to improve their own style of expression. Still another class craves excitement, while a considerable element seeks books for diversion alone. The staid jurist has been known to fairly revel in a detective story wholly devoid of literary value. The financier may forget his cares and responsibilities as he loses himself in the pages of a love story.

Learned men have been asked recently what would be their selections among books if forced to confine themselves to a short list with no opportunity for replenishment. One of them named the Bible, Plato's Dialogues, Homer's Odyssey, the Odes of Horace, Dante's Divine Comedy, Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, Spenser's Faerie Queene, Shakespeare's plays, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, ending with Browning's poems. Truly an interesting list to contemplate. For the most part, and to the reader of ordinary training and intelligence, a list of deadly dullness.

There is a devotion to the classics far more simulated than real. It would be an excellent thing for the mind were it to become familiarized with them. Here and there is the scholar who delights in them, getting from them inspiration, instruction and pleasure. As a rule the person who asserts a yearning for such food as the thoughtful find in, for example, Plato and Homer, are pretending. They are as those who exclaim joyously at the opportunity to hear grand opera, but are attuned to melody such as is embodied in the Arkansaw Traveler.

The serious reader, bent upon culture, certainly would rely in large measure upon the classics. Were he to be marooned on a desert island for the rest of his life, he would want something lighter, probably becoming wishful for a glimpse of the daily paper, comic supplement and all.

The professor is quite welcome to his books. Lesser intellectual lights would be glad to borrow a volume from his choice library occasionally. Certainly none could well dispense with the Bible or Shakespeare.

MEN OF LARGE IDEAS

H. E. Huntington and A. P. Fleming recently have won high praise for generous and beneficent acts designed for promotion of the public interest. Mr. Huntington has made available to the public an unexampled array of the best in art. For the advancement of literature he presents a wealth in books and in rare manuscripts, his collection being virtually the history of letters. All this he has housed beautifully in the midst of scenic splendors, and given over to the people. It is theirs freely. It could not be taken back. The edifice, with its surroundings are part of the gift.

Mr. Fleming's contribution has been to science. He has equipped with the means of following their investigations, the most astute minds engaged in research, the discovery of physical truth, that knowing it, the race may assume a higher plane intellectually. He adds to knowledge by endowing scholars whose lives are devoted to the work. Thus Mr. Huntington, neither artist nor writer, and Mr. Fleming, not a scientist, do measureless good by the impetus they impart to the student or the master along the favored lines.

Another type of generosity, wholly different in the form of expression, is that of Henry A. Dix of New York. Retiring from business he turns it over to the men whom he has trained, supplying them with ample capital to carry it on. He has given millions to charity. For himself he retains only enough to meet his modest wants. He is through, he says, and happy to be through. His joy now is in seeing others attended by the prosperity that was largely the creation of his own effort.

Thus some individuals are permitted by their unselfishness, not only to do specific good, but to strengthen belief in human nature.

Pupils of the Van Nuys schools are beginning to save money in order to start bank accounts. There is a keen but friendly rivalry in the effort of individuals to have the biggest deposit. Aside from the lesson in economy and finance, any plan that prevents school children from spending their nickels for the edible trash so many of them crave, will have parental approval.

When the people of Austria rage at the mention of the names of Ludendorff, Hindenburg and others of that class, evidence that a change has come over the spirit of their dreams, is complete. Had the allies gone ahead with their original plan of punishing the criminal promoters of the world war, the names now capable of creating loud protest, might have been nearly forgotten by this time.

The capture of one Phil. Alguin, the supposed slayer of a police detective of Los Angeles, must be set down as a triumph over many difficulties. Alguin is of the underworld, and its forces backed him in the effort to defeat justice. He is said to have admitted the crime boastingly, but this was when he thought he was to remain free.

Citizens of California believe that the initiative has fully vindicated itself. They resent the efforts to cripple and hamper the operations of a law that has been so satisfactory in its workings. Such effort was made at election, and it seems to have been transferred to the legislature.

IOWA STILL FAITHFUL

Census figures show that Iowa does not lead in respect of the number of natives of that state now living in southern California. Indeed, the statistician coldly thrusts it into fifth place. That position is technically correct, but it gives the uninformed observer a wrong impression. Ex-Iowans who dwell by the hundreds of thousands in this immediate community were not all born in Iowa. The fact that they lived there, and came hither from that commonwealth, makes their title as ex-Iowans secure. People familiar with Iowa socially considered, are aware that a strong proportion of the residents came from New England. They came in many instances, bringing large families. By the time the boys had grown up, the call of the farther west was persistent, and the younger generation answered it. Ultimately a large proportion got as far as southern California and they are here yet, with no desire to be elsewhere. They are ex-Iowans, and will tell you so. They go to the annual picnic and there they register as ex-Iowans. And that is exactly what they are. The census man says not, but he is no authority in this instance.

Those who send their good money to others for get-rich-quick information enable the others to get rich without any information.

SNOBS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

It is time a new Thackeray arose to write a new book on snobs.

This age with all its democracy is as snobbish as any former age.

Dr. Frank Crane

The essence of snobbery is to judge a person by what he has, or the place he occupies, rather than by his real worth.

We still love a lord, and kowtow to a millionaire, and stand aside for a cabinet minister.

Of course achievement and position are entitled to a certain respect, but we are apt to forget that a human being is also entitled to respect. A true gentleman is courteous to every lady, and as gentle and thoughtful toward a scrubwoman or a waitress as toward a duchess.

It is very important that parents should select those schools that are clean of snobbishness.

Winifred Black writes of a mother who took her girl away from a certain school, giving this reason:

"She learned snobbery at the boarding school, and we've had a terrible time to get it out of her system. She got to judging people by the kind of car that came to school after them, and girls whose mothers wore smart furs were always perfectly all right to little Mary.

"Poor little thing! She couldn't help being snobbish—it was in the air at the fashionable boarding school where we sent her when I was called south to look after my mother in her last long illness."

The tradition of the "gentleman" and "lady" is one of the first things the English race has produced. Every effort should be made to keep that tradition strong and sweet. Especially we should teach our children to respect character wherever they may see it.

Honesty, thoughtfulness and courage are things to be looked up to whether they are exemplified by a chimney sweep or a duke.

Particularly it should be impressed upon young minds that one of the surest signs of vulgarity is to be insolent and contemptuous toward those whose social position is lower than our own.

There is a good deal of snobbishness in English literature, but there is also much manly and forthright contempt of it. The novels of Dickens and the poetry of Burns contain the highest type of true English integrity of spirit.

Dickens found worth and beauty among people in the humblest walks of life, and always directed our admiration toward real manliness rather than toward those who were fortunate by birth or wealth.

And throughout the poetry of Burns runs the wholesome sentiment expressed in the lines:

The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
The man's the gowd for a' that.
A prince can make a belted knight,
A marquis, duke, and a' that;
But an honest man's aboon his might,
Guid faith, he maunna fa' that.

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON

DISCUSSION CLUB

(Join)

(The following discussion is also a reply to J. C. K. of Lewiston, Idaho, who has asked if better is not the right word.)

"Better" or "Best"?

"Observer," Cleveland, Ohio: "In your column for January 11 you have, 'Right: Which do you like best, fall, that is to say, autumn, or winter?' Since when has it become fashionable to use 'best' for 'better' where two things, only, are considered, 'which is to say, autumn', being parenthetical, only."

Mr. Nicholson: The last sentence of the foregoing comment, or, more properly, query, should have been followed by an interrogation point (?).

The following may prove interesting to "Observer":

"The superlative indicates an object as at the head of its class or group. But two objects may constitute a group, and one of the two may be thought of as surpassing all else in that class or group without any reference to the number. Hence the expression, 'This is the best of the two' is the most forcible that can be employed, and is always used by persons who have not been carefully taught to avoid it. This very natural and forcible usage is now approved and followed by many good authors, though 'This is the better of the two' is ordinarily regarded as more elegant by careful speakers and writers." A Working Grammar of the English Language, James C. Fernald.

Fernald quotes from Mactzner's English Grammar as follows: "The superlative is disapproved of by many grammarians where the totality does not exceed duality, although it is not avoided by the language.

"'Her mother seemed the youngest of the two.' Thackeray.

"'And the best half should have been returned to him.' Shakespeare.

". . . the superlative is not absurd, in which the duality is disregarded, and the object . . . is denoted as affected with the quality in the highest degree in the class, which is treated as numerically indifferent."

In spite of the foregoing, however, "The Right Word" approves of better (rather than best) in the sentence under dispute. The three words probably took the writer off his guard when he corrected them from Fall, Autumn, and Winter to fall, autumn, and winter.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

Tut-ankh-amen.

It sounds as if it might be the refrain to some evangelical song.

Notably the last two syllables.

JAMES W. FOLEY

But it is not.

It's the name of a ruler of Egypt some three thousand or more years ago.

A ruler who is now dead.

It is hardly necessary to say that.

A man who has been buried and sealed up in a tomb for more than three thousand years is surely dead.

We say it to emphasize a state of being.

That whatever may have been his power or authority or riches or what-not, time has melted them all to nothingness in his pot of years.

That is a way time has.

A way of melting down material things to nothingness as far as the once owner is concerned.

There is a way to perpetuate material values.

And that is by making them severe.

By putting them into the hands of some body who will keep them working.

For the benefit of humanity.

Thus a million dollars might be melted to nothingness, as far as the once owner is concerned.

Time and the years render the owner back to the dust whence he came.

But the material wealth he leaves may be made to serve.

By the wisdom of bequest

Just as has been done hereabouts in the past few days.

When a rich man with vision has given millions to endow an educational institution.

And from that endowment will come:

Truth.

Training.

Vision.

Leadership.

Achievement.

All this as a benefit to the human family.

Proving that wealth has virtue.

But the virtue is not alone in the wealth.

It is in the use and application of it.

And so we make use of the ancient Egyptian ruler.

To prove that life, power, authority, wealth—all these are evanescet and transitory.

It is vision that counts.

A man is remembered to some extent for who he was.

To some extent for that he was.

But to the greatest extent for what he did.

Christ is remembered for what He did.

Columbus is remembered for what he did.

Lincoln is remembered for what he did.

* * *

So it is interesting that we have discovered the tomb of another ruler of ancient Egypt.

It is interesting to know what art there was.

What wealth there was.

What glory there was.

But the lesson of it all is in the vain and transitory nature of human power or authority.

* * *

It is not what we are.

What we seem.

What we have.

It is what we do.

Not what we gain but what we leave to the world.

That is the true test of greatness.

ALAS, THE POOR PROFESSIONAL WOMAN

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

When you are summing up the things that hamper professional women don't omit as the chief item on your list the visiting mania of their domestic sisters.

Women will never have an even break in the professional world until they free themselves of the visiting barnacles. By that I mean until they refuse to allow idle and thoughtless women to drain their strength and consume their time.

Men succeed because they clear the decks for action and keep them clear. They dispose of their leisure as they please and not as their relatives and friends please. What do you fancy would happen to a man who made a habit of parking in the offices of his professional friends just because he found time hanging a bit heavy on his hands? He would be ejected as a nuisance; and yet it is a rare woman who does not regard the opening of a professional woman acquaintance's office as a fat opportunity offered her to run in and loaf or run in and gossip. That she may be intruding in business hours does not occur to her. Neither does it occur to her that she is robbing the professional woman of time and precious rest hours when she takes advantage of her home coming to "drop in."

"You are home so little, my dear; and I just get hungry to see you."

This to a writer, a doctor, a lawyer, a newspaper woman, the head of a department in a mercantile establishment, a teacher or an agent. All such women come home not only weary to death of the sound of the human voice; but longing for quiet and an opportunity to look after their clothes, to read a bit or to plan next day's work.

But relatives and friends ignore everything but their own selfish desires; and it never occurs to them that they are cruelly hampering a hard working sister. Professional women are compelled to give up many things that domestic women take as a matter of course, and one of these things is the visiting habit. A woman simply can not succeed in the business world if all her spare time is taken by acquaintances. Her time must be her own to do with as she will, just as a man's time is his to dispose of as he sees fit.

Men have never been greatly addicted to the visiting mania and as a sex they recognize the impropriety of intruding on the time of other men unless by special appointment.

Women must do the same thing if they are to keep pace with men in the commercial world. The time of the professional woman must belong to her and she alone must say when and how it shall be spent. Unless she does this she faces failure, and more than likely a nervous breakdown in addition.

I hope the domestic women will take the hint.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

TRAMPLING SOVEREIGNTY

[Manufacturers' Record]

It is very evident to every thoughtful man that the spirit of lawlessness which finds expression in the violation of the prohibition law is creative of the spirit of lawlessness which found expression in the fearful massacres at Herrin and in the viler and more despicable murders at Mer Rouge, and which finds expression in every mob that lynches a criminal; for all of these acts flaunt in the face the nation's power to pass and enforce laws. All of these acts, great or small as they may seem, stamp in the mud and mire the very sovereignty of the state—the only thing which keeps the people from sinking back into the barbarism of the days when men gloated as they drank their wines from the skulls of the prisoners whom they had captured and murdered.

Back to law and order! Back to reason and right! Back to a spirit which makes every law violator a criminal in the sight of himself and every honest man and in the sight of God, is the only way through which we can move to safety and to the upbuilding of civilization and to the salvation of this country from utter ruin!

These are not idle words, nor thoughtlessly written; they are the living truth; and every honest man, regardless of what may be his feelings about this law or that, knows that these words are true; and he knows that in violating law he is sapping the very moral fibre of himself, his family, his associates, and his community.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

At times the government has been accused of wanton expenditure for buildings. It is possible that here and there some shrewd representative of the cross roads has procured a a federal building wherewith to bedeck his community, and manifest his fitness for re-election. At the same time, when the government declines to erect such buildings are are urgently needed, but elects to rent, often at extortionate figures, it is guilty of extravagance.

HENRY JAMES

In one of the eastern cities the government has just closed a contract to rent quarters for offices for a period of years at a total of $10,000,000. By the investment of such a sum it could have built the structure for a sum far less, and at the end of the specified period neither had to move nor enter into a new contract at a higher rate. In this respect the federal government often is copied by the state.

California needs a building in the southern end of the state. It would, in the long long run, save money by putting up such a building. At present its several departments are quartered in various places remote from each other, inconvenient and inadequate. The amounts paid as rentals would in a short time cover the cost of a proper building.

There is a move for a new federal building at Los Angeles, and similar projects for several other large cities. The demand is not, as is sometimes the case, that public work be done for the sake of giving employment, as there is no present lack of employment, but because of actual and pressing need.

Sometimes even in an area of economy, the expenditure of money is necessary for the saving of money.

Actual work has been begun on Mulholland Skyline Drive along the crest of the Santa Monica mountains. This will have a gorgeous setting, beautiful, inspiring; below it the sea.

Coal miners work in constant peril. They do not get rich at it. Still there always is an over supply of such labor.

Unhappily, however great a shock may be imparted by the news of a coal mine tragedy on a large scale, the element of surprise is absent. Such disaster seems to be due at any time.

The catastrophe at Dawson, N. M., is the second on a huge scale to occur in the same workings. There are many safety devices. They do not appear to assure safety. Can't science do something effective about it?

In the minor news from Europe is to be found mention of two rich young Americans. They were over there with nothing to do but mischief, and went about their task with zest.

One, whose father is many times a millionaire, was sent to jail for six months and fined heavily. The charge was that he had passed spurious checks on a gambler. The fact is that an American visiting Europe is under no obligation to have traffic with a gambler; but having it, and losing, his part of the deal should be to settle up with other than bogus paper.

The other case was similar, except that the prisoner was under arrest and had not actually been found guilty. Neither young man is named here, as they both belong to families that would feel the disgrace of publicity in connection with such episodes.

Oil men express a desire for a greater market for the local product which has reached tremendous volume. The army of gasoline consumers naturally hope, on hearing of the abundant supply of oil, that possibly the thought of reducing prices may occur to the producers.

One very particular hardened sinner, found guilty of two gross crimes, and known to be guilty of many others, has been sentenced to the California penitentiary. On each of the convictions he receives a life term, the terms to run consecutively. This is a little difficult to figure out. One authority says the prisoner cannot even ask for probation until the end of twenty-five years. If a life sentence has any meaning he cannot ask for it then. But were he to ask it and get it, he still would face a life sentence.

Fifi Stillman—everybody knows Fifi—sought to get her salary as ex-wife raised from $90,000 to $120,000 a year, but the judge turned the proposition down flat.

What could the poor woman do? The pitiful struggle to get along on the pittance she scorned was out of the question. Then a happy thought. She would start a millinery shop, sell a few bonnets, and cease to worry over the paltry $30,000 the judge held out on her.

WATCHING THE PARADE

BY JOHN PILGRIM

We're apt to talk in slogans. Most of us, anyhow. Some one says something that is usually true and we all take it for granted. We do not stop to think. So that after listening to Old Bill Ruddy's stories for a time I emitted this profound but rather time-worn thought:

"You can't beat the races."

"Sure you can," said Old Bill. "Sure you can beat 'em. But you can't beat yourself."

Old Bill does not go racing nowadays, but when he was a young man he gave the game a thorough tryout and went broke. Then he got angry, he said. His father had said some things to him which were only justified by their truth and the family relationships. Old Bill determined to prove that the races can be beaten.

"So I lived with 'em," he said. "I got on confidential terms with horses, stable boys, and owners. For weeks at a time I did not bet a cent. When I did bet I was conservative. I studied the game just as I would a profession. Any one can pore over the dope, but I got into the inside of racing politics and the finances of horsemen. At the end of the second season I had got back the money I had originally lost, enough to pay me a mighty good salary for my time, and a bankroll in addition. Then I went around to brag to my old man.

"'Your system is all right,' said he. 'But the trouble is that human nature hasn't changed. Now that you know it all you'll go broke.'"

Which is precisely what Old Bill did the next season. He was a little too prosperous, a little inclined to take chances instead of cinches. His head had swelled and he grew careless. Instead of worrying about breakfast money he fussed about the light hitting his eyes as he laid in bed of a morning. Now his theory is that we can all make good—at any job and anywhere—so long as we concentrate on it. Lives of rich men, says Old Bill, still remind us we can make our lives a crime.

"But as soon as we begin to fat up and get soft we forget to concentrate," says he. "We think we have been successful because we're such smart little fellows. But the fact is we succeeded because we worked."

"Heart of the Verdugos"

THROUGH THE CONCEPTION OF AN IDEAL

and the broad scope of a comprehensive plan for its development, this magnificent tract of 1500 acres has become A RECOGNIZED INTSITUTION.

Grasp the Idea of Its Bigness

Over two and one-half square miles in area, it comprises long gradual slopes, elevated mesas, rolling hills, secluded canyons, rugged promontories, picturesque hillsides and oak groves—all of which will be covered with beautiful homes. Millions will be spent in the installation of all the improvements that will contribute to the health, happiness, comfort and pleasure of a community of 40,000, while an artistically planned segregated business district will fully meet every domestic and economic need.

HERE IS BUILDING A CITY under the supervision of a board of architectural experts. Nearer to Fifth and Broadway than the heart of Hollywood, with a finer car service, a Country Club, with mammoth swimming pool and 18-hole Golf Course; a Community Center Bldg. and Greek Theatre, will add to the joy of living.

LINEBERGER HAS NEWS AND SEED FOR YOU

Writes to Glendale Daily Press How Things Are Going

The following letter has been received from Congressman Walter F. Lineberger of this district, by the Glendale Daily Press.

February 2, 1923.

The Editor, Glendale Press,
Glendale, Cal.

My Dear Sir: The Department of Agriculture has advised me that several packages of Peruvian alfalfa, feterita, soybeans and Sudan grass seed are available for experimental purposes by those who are particularly interested in demonstrating the usefulness of these crops. If any of your readers desire to test any one or all of these, I will be glad to have them communicate with me so that I may take the matter up with the department and see that it is sent them. The department will keep in touch with the experimenter, requesting periodical reports, and will assist in every way possible with the work.

The appropriation for seed has been omitted from the agricultural appropriation bill this year, so seed will not be available for distribution next winter. However, there is now on hand an assortment of vegetable as well as flower seed for the individual gardens; also the Year Books and other pamphlets issued by the department, which I will be glad to send to any one making a request therefor.

The supply bills necessary for the maintenance of governmental functions are demanding practically all of the time of the members just now, and very little new legislation is under consideration. Matters which have passed the house are receiving attention by the senate, and vice versa, so that as much of it as possible may be completed before the end of the session.

The Bursum-Fuller bill granting an increase of pension to Civil war veterans and their widows, which was recently vetoed by the president, has been reintroduced in simplified form, and many of the members hope to see it enacted into law before the fourth of March.

Among public documents available for the Ninth district are agricultural conference reports, reports of the joint agricultural committee, reports of the secretaries of the various departments and bureaus, copies of the four messages to congress delivered by the president, and copies of the conference documents including the address of the president and Secretary Hughes at the opening of the conference on the Limitation of Armaments, as well as various other publications too numerous to mention. Should you or any of your readers desire these publications and will write to me specifying the particular ones in which they are interested, it will be a pleasure to forward them as long as the supply lasts.

One particular piece of legislation in which I am greatly interested is the appropriation making possible the further development of rivers and harbors. This item is included in the army appropriation bill. No specific sum is appropriated for any particular locality, but the board of army engineers allot the funds appropriated according to the needs of the project, and California will be given her proportionate share.

This should materially assist in developing the Los Angeles-Long Beach harbor, although that program will of necessity extend over a number of years, and will require additional appropriations as the work progresses.

Many members feel that a comprehensive program for government ownership of buildings used for government work, all over the country, should be started at the earliest possible date, and the committee having charge of this work is prepared to report out such a bill, but the administration feels that the time is not yet ripe to begin this.

The president has stated, however, that he hopes it will be practicable to start this program during his administration, and realizing the great difficulties under which many of the departments are working here in Washington, as well as all over the country, I also sincerely hope this will be possible.

Members of congress will welcome the recess ahead of them, for they feel a closer touch with their constituents, and a personal interchange of ideas which has not been practicable to any great extent for the last few years, will be mutually helpful. I assure you that for myself I will heartily welcome the opportunity to get back to California.

With kind regards, I am,
Very truly yours,
WALTER F. LINEBERGER.

A PRAYER

Help us to do the needed thing with grace,
Help us to greet the day
Before us with a smile upon the face
Help us to walk the way
With upright steps and firm and purpose bright,
Help us to keep
Straight in the path of duty, and at night
Bring us to sleep.

Help us to love each other and with hearts
Grown warm help us to play
With courage and fair smiles the humble parts
That may be ours today.
Help us to be unselfish and more kind,
With joy not spent
In envious yearnings, help us now to find
What is content.

Help us the greater gifts of ours to share
With those in trial and need,
Help us be strong and glad to lift and bear
The burden; and the deed
That love commands us help us now to do;
Give us the grace
To greet the day and walk with it all through
With smiling face.

Help us to play the part of men above
The petty things and small,
Help us to know the golden rule of love
That shall encompass all
The length and breadth of duty, yours and mine,
Help us keep, then,
That spark of what in us we call divine
Help us be men.

COLLEGE STUDENT IS COMPETITIVE HUMAN

AUSTIN, Texas, Feb. 13.—The American youth is the most competitive of all males unless it be the Australian. The American has a passion to win.

So says Berry M. Whitaker, director of intramural sports at the University of Texas. In fact, only voluntary athletes of a competitive nature can induce the American college student to take exercise, this coach believes. And if he can't do something for the sake of winning, he won't do it at all.

"With the exception of the Australian," says Coach Whitaker, "no people take such joy in playing to win. The Englishman likes athletics, but he takes his exercise in a leisurely manner for the love of the sport. The Germans and the Scandinavians love gymnastic work. It was once attempted to introduce the gymnastic method of exercise in America, but the attempt failed because of the nature of the people."

So, when it became obvious that most American university students were taking all their exercise vicariously by sitting in bleachers, intramural sports were organized. Now forty teams are competing in baseball in the University of Texas. The league, which includes nine departments of the university, has contests in football, baseball, basketball, track, boxing, wrestling, cross country, swimming, tennis, and handball. The fraternity league has 21 divisions and offers competitive basketball, track, tennis, swimming, and handball. The big fraternity and rooming-house league contends in basketball and baseball.
